

Subject: Lasers Treat Complicated Conditions

Date: Thu, June 17, 2010 11:51:38 PM

To: rgcrackers@yahoo.com

From: Richard S. Ray, D.C.

email: xxxx@qwest.net, phone#: 123-456-7890

Dear Dr Graham,

I returned home from the recent seminar excited about the prospect of greater success with greater knowledge of the Mark Y laser programs. One of my first patients was Jenny. She has been a very compliant, but complicated patient. She presented with extremely weak muscles that made it impossible for her to drive herself to the office today. She had to crawl up her legs to get out of the chair. This was made more difficult because her arms, wrist and hands were as weak as her legs and core body muscles. Her hands were floppy. She was unable to move them into neutral position or hold them up once placed in neutral position. She couldn't lift her arms up above her head without sliding them along her body, unable to lift against gravity: a true grade 2+ strength.

It took a little longer to upregulate her muscles to full strength today, but with a little extra work she was able to stand up with very little effort and we began our walk around the office to re-integrate the muscle coordination. This is all accomplished with the Mark III Laser Pulser. As usual, by about the third time around the office, she was walking fairly normal, but the strenuous work out to get her muscles to full strength began to zap her stamina and her eyes began to glaze over and began drifting as if she was about to pass out. This is one of her common presentations that usually accompany shaking arms with occasional flailing of arms and a spastic jerking of her forearms at the elbows. After using the Mark Y with the new meridian and auricular protocols she returned to normal.

The next day I got a call from her mom that she had developed a violent, sharp jerking of her head to the left every two to three seconds. By the time I was able to see her it was about two to three hours later without any change. I went through some of the protocols suggested for her condition with no success on her new problem. I finally tested her for each protocol in the list with no positive signs. At that point I asked her to tell me what she had done differently today that might give me a clue as to where to search next. She mentioned that her naturopath had put her on a different Omega 3 product and she had increased from 3 to 4 capsules today. At that point I went through all of the allergy cards and found meat/fish to be a problem for her. Within 3 minutes of starting the therapy her neck jerking ceased and the eyes began to focus clearly again. Thank goodness for the Mark V LazrPulsr. Until now,

I never would have even tried to treat a case like this. No other doctor that we have sent her to has been able to do anything to help her. This includes Barrow's Neurologic Institute and numerous other doctors. Without the Mark V, I have no idea where she would be today.

Appreciatively submitted,

Dr. Ray

Cold Laser Testimony

In 2008, I was diagnosed with peripheral neuropathy and surgery consultation was scheduled. As I questioned the neurologist's direction, I was told Dr. Ray's cold laser may help. In early 2009, I attended his seminar and scheduled for cold laser treatment. My symptoms of tingling and numbness in the hands and feet as well as pain in the elbows went away after several treatments. This treatment enabled me to go off the drug Neurontin. Dr. Ray informed me that the diagnosis I was given of peripheral neuropathy was inaccurate.

My symptoms of extreme muscle weakness progressed to the point that my back went out while doing an everyday activity. Dr. Ray discovered the extent of muscle weakness which I had only been aware of as affecting my arms. With the cold laser, he was able to strengthen my muscles, through up-regulation. All through this timeframe, I was searching for a correct diagnosis but doctors and numerous specialists were unable to help. As time progressed, my muscle weakness would return and sometimes with greater severity. Because of my weakness, I struggled with simple tasks such as getting hand soap from a pump dispenser, lifting my arms to wash my hair, clicking a computer mouse button and getting a cup out of the kitchen cabinet. I had problems with climbing any slope, unable to lift my feet much more than one half inch above the ground. I had to use my hips to swing my legs just to walk. Sitting up from a laying down position and standing up from a sitting down position became a challenge. Each time I experienced these weaknesses, I would seek Dr. Ray for help. After cold laser, I was always able to do these tasks with ease.

As if muscle weakness wasn't enough, I began to experience muscle spasms which my internist said resembled seizures. Dr. Ray was able to calm the muscle spasms with cold laser. Sometimes, when I had muscle spasms it felt like a war going on internally but after cold laser, the spasms stop and there was overall calm. One time during muscle spasms, I also had chest pain. The moment the laser was aimed at my heart, the pain vanished.

Of greater concern was difficulty breathing. On one particular morning, I came in to see Dr. Ray as I was gasping for air every few words. After cold laser treatment, I was breathing normally. A number of times, Dr. Ray has lasered me for lightheadedness and blurred vision. In just a matter of minutes, my vision was restored and my lightheadedness disappeared.

I have also experienced a frightening reaction to a medication for which I once again, sought cold laser therapy. The symptoms I was experiencing included blurred vision close to passing out, spasms resembling convulsions, headache, crying for no reason, gasping for air, feeling mentally crazy, loss of thought and cold sweats. All of these symptoms disappeared during one cold laser treatment. Of course, I immediately stopped that medication.

A strange symptom appeared later. I started having slowness of speech which became slurred speech. I noticed my tongue was swollen and the edges were scalloped, indicating edema. Who else could I rely on to fix another one of my symptoms? Since 20 other doctors and specialists have not been able to diagnose or help alleviate any of my symptoms, I turned to Dr. Ray's cold laser once again. After a few minutes, Dr. Ray gave me a tongue twister to say which I could repeat successfully.

Additional benefits, which I was not specifically treated for, include: no cavities (in the past I frequently have had cavities) and less severe seasonal allergies.

Dr. Ray's thorough knowledge of cold laser, laser protocols, and testing techniques allowed me to keep my job and health insurance as long as possible. The success I have had with cold laser has allowed me to function while searching for a diagnosis and cure.

Submitted by Jenny S.