

Incorporating Natural Energy Medicine into your Practice. Other Neurologic Dysfunctions

(Part 19)

Dementia and Autism are just two of numerous neurological dysfunctions that your patients can suffer from. Even though these are two of the most common forms of neurological issues that we see in our practice there are many others that respond very well to natural energy medicine. Many times these other neurological issues respond well to the same protocols as dementia or autism and with the Mk 7 therapy system we have one Neurological Dysfunction protocol that covers almost all of these issues.

So regardless of the neurological issues these are patients that desperately need energy medicine care as this form of care is many times one of the very few forms of care that they will respond to. Then when you factor in that you will never injure one of your patients with natural energy medicine this form of care should always be one of the first forms of care to try.

It is true that many of these other disorders are more difficult to treat. This is why as you utilize the preset protocols for the more common neurological disorders you continue to learn how to work with neurological conditions. In a short time you will be very comfortable working with almost any neurologic disorder.
